

Faculty Writing Groups Launch Meeting, Feb. 4, 12:30-1:30, RSVP

Research finds that faculty writing groups or “research circles” improve publication rates and promote work-life balance, promotion, and retention. The meeting will include a short discussion of varied formats for writing groups and evidence on why they work. Small interdisciplinary groups (3-4 members) will be organized for those who wish to participate. These writing accountability groups are a proven strategy to help faculty find time to publish, as discussed in Sylvia’s How to Write a Lot: A Practical Guide to Productive Academic Writing (2007). In these groups, faculty meet briefly bi-weekly. Each member sets and shares concrete, short-term goals for their research and writing for the next two weeks. This is an effective way to make progress by setting goals and creating accountability.

A Peer Network for Career Advancement & Satisfaction: A Luncheon for Women Faculty, Feb. 11, 12-1:00, RSVP

This networking luncheon is designed to foster collaborations among women faculty from across campus with the intention of creating self-sustaining interdisciplinary peer networks. In peer networks, faculty discuss challenges, share information, and brainstorm on how to address them. Peer networks offer effective collaborative opportunities for both junior and mid-career faculty. At this event, women will be grouped based on their RSVPs on their career interests and other factors (e.g., getting your book published, getting tenure, advancing from associate to full). By facilitating the introduction of women with similar experiences, these peer groups become a source of career guidance and interdisciplinary collaboration. RSVP required. Please bring your business cards!

Going Up for Full, March 4, 3:30-5:00, RSVP

There will be panel and table discussions of how to document the progress of research programs and use administrative and service commitments to document the impact of research contributions. The discussion will draw on The Modern Language Association’s Standing Still survey of the career patterns of associate professors and other studies of the impact of service and administrative duties on the promotion of female faculty, including The Ivory Ceiling of Service Work, as also discussed in articles such as the Chronicle of Higher Education’s “Why are associate professors so unhappy?”

Making Your Candidate Statement, March 31, 3:30-5:00, RSVP

Candidates will work in small groups with senior faculty in related fields to discuss sample candidate statements. Candidate statements are vital to outlining the impact of candidates’ service, teaching, and research. They play an especially important role in documenting the sorts of community-based scholarship, partnerships and outreach that were highlighted in our revisions of University promotion criteria to develop an Inclusive View of Scholarship.

Annual Workshop on Preparing the Promotion Dossier, April 16, 8:00-9:30, RSVP not required

The Annual Workshop on Promotion and Tenure and Continuing Status provides an overview of the promotion review process for candidates, committee members and administrators. It provides details on recent revisions in our policies and opportunities to ask questions about our Guide to the Promotion Process, which should be reviewed before attending this workshop.

Preparing Teaching and Outreach Portfolios, April 22, 3:30-5:00, RSVP

In spring 2013 the Faculty Senate approved revisions to our promotion criteria to institute an Inclusive View of Scholarship. Following up on the Senate’s leadership, promotion dossiers were expanded to include teaching portfolios, required classroom observations, and an optional service and outreach portfolio. In this workshop and discussion, we will offer advice to candidates and reviewers on these revisions, and we will also welcome suggestions on how to improve support for preparing teaching portfolios.
